*Thomas F. Coleman,
Michael A. Vasquez &

The three of us have been working together for 25 years promoting equal rights for unmarried and single Americans. We started out in 1981 by protecting the right of personal privacy. Our human rights agenda then expanded to include respect for family diversity, benefits for domestic partners, and fairness for all single people.

Our work as board members of Unmarried America is premised on the belief that everyone deserves to be treated with respect, dignity, and fairness regardless of their marital status, family structure, or household configuration. This includes the equitable treatment of unmarried individuals, couples, and families by employment policies, business practices, and government programs.

Over the years, Unmarried America has become the leading provider of information for the nation's growing unmarried population. Good corporate and public policies depend on accurate information, which is what we offer through our library, news service, and radio show.

Since Unmarried America is a nonprofit organization, we rely on support from the population we serve – unmarried and single Americans like you.

Please join our community of supporters by making a tax-deductible donation to Unmarried America. By working together we can shape a better future for everyone.

One of the main features of Unmarried America is its news service and online library, known as Library One.

Each day we search the Internet for breaking news and current events affecting the lives of single people everywhere. Several times a week, we post these news stories in one of three news sections of our website: Recent News, Domestic Partner News, and International News. Commentaries, opinion pieces, and feature stories are also reported on our website.

The archives of Library One now contain more than 6,700 pages of information – from hard news, to practical advice, to scholarly papers – in the following areas:

- Demographic trends
- Legal rights
- Political issues
- Workplace practices
- Financial advice
- Health concerns
- Tax reform
- Lifestyle enhancement
- Book reviews

People who make a donation of $25 to Unmarried America get an annual pass to Library One with a password which gives them access to all pages of the website.

As an added benefit, a pass also enables library patrons to search the site for key words or phrases.

Donations of $50 or more also receive premiums as listed on the donation panel of this brochure.

Radio One is the Voice of Unmarried America – a weekly talk show providing an educational and entertaining forum focusing on the lives and the interests of unmarried and single Americans.

You will find the show interesting and informative whether you are unattached or partnered, divorced or widowed, gay or straight.

Radio One has unique program content. We do not dwell endlessly on the search for romance or complaints about failed love relationships. People can find that type of programming elsewhere.

Radio One provides expert advice and stimulating conversations focusing on topics and concerns which affect the other 90 percent of your life – work and home, health and finance, religion and politics, family and friends, travel and recreation.

Radio One is also unique in its accessibility options. Because it is broadcast via the Internet – through World Talk Radio – the show is available to listeners 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. If you can't tune in for a live show, you can listen to it later when the time is more convenient for you schedule.

Radio One has three segments. The show's host, Thomas F. Coleman, talks about the previous week's news stories and Column One commentary in the first part. The second segment features a special guest, often an expert on a topic of interest to single people. The host and the guest engage in a stimulating conversation designed to enlighten and entertain the audience.

In the third part of the show, callers can ask their questions or voice their opinions about whatever happens to be on their minds.

Like public radio, this show is a nonprofit venture and depends on support from listeners like you. Donations to Radio One are tax-deductible.

Thomas F. Coleman, an attorney with 33 years of political and legal experience, writes a commentary each week known as Column One – Eye on Unmarried America.

Although it is non-partisan in nature, Column One has a political perspective, looking at current events in a distinctly different manner than most editorial essays.

The focus of Column One is always about how these events are affecting the lives and the pocketbooks of 87 million unmarried and single Americans.

He leaves it to others – and there are of plenty of columnists and commentators in this category – to write about saving the institution of marriage or resurrecting the “traditional family”.

New additions to Column One are posted on the website of Unmarried America each Monday. In time we expect that Column One will be published by newspapers throughout the nation.

Send us your suggestions for topics and don't forget to ask your local newspaper to carry Column One.
