Re: Proposed non-discrimination ordinance

Dear Mr. Rice:

I am attaching a copy of a legal memorandum which may be of assistance to you in your research concerning a non-discrimination ordinance. This memo was done by a San Francisco attorney in connection with the proposal in that city to adopt a similar ordinance. It seems to answer many of the questions I posed to you in my letter of February 6.

While the memo supports the authority of the City of Los Angeles to adopt an ordinance prohibiting discrimination for reasons of sexual orientation, it seems to negate any authority to adopt a more comprehensive ordinance covering other classifications which are already covered by state law, e.g. race, religion, color, sex, etc. However, your research may contradict this memo.

The memo does not address whether a local ordinance prohibiting discrimination in public accomodation and housing would be preempted by state law. The Unruh Act does not specifically mention "sexual orientation" and the Rumford Fair Housing Act likewise does not mention "sexual orientation." However, courts have said that Unruh prohibits all arbitrary discrimination. Also, Unruh seems to apply to housing and public accomodations. Therefore, there is already a private cause of action for arbitrary discrimination under state law. The question arises, is sexual orientation discrimination in public accomodation or housing "arbitrary?" If sexual orientation discrimination in housing and public accomodations is covered by Unruh, does this preempt a local ordinance prohibiting such discrimination? These questions have not been answered by any Court of Appeal decision directly on point. There is only dicta to rely on for any authority.

I would therefore like to venture an opinion in this regard.

letter to
John Rice

It would appear that the City of Los Angeles definitely has the authority to adopt a local ordinance prohibiting discrimination by private employers for reasons of sexual orientation. Expanding an employment ordinance to cover other categories such as race, sex, religion, etc. would be risky because of preemption problems.

The City of Los Angeles may or may not have the authority to prohibit sexual orientation discrimination with respect to housing and public accommodations. If sexual orientation discrimination is already covered by Unruh (which is only a matter of court dicta at this point) then a local ordinance may be void because of preemption. However, if Unruh does not prohibit public accommodation and housing discrimination for reasons of sexual orientation, then the city probably can pass a local ordinance to fill the void. I think that public accommodations and housing should be included in the proposed ordinance. The worst that could happen would be that at sometime in the future a court would declare those portions of the ordinance void as pre-empted by state law (of course the ordinance should have an explicit severability clause to save the employment provision should such a court opinion ever be issued). I'm sure that gays would be delighted to have a court void the housing and public accommodations portions because gays are protected by state law (such a local loss would be a statewide victory).

I hope that these thoughts will help you in formulating your opinion.

Very truly yours,

THOMAS F. COLEMAN

I.
INTRODUCTION

This memorandum will set out the legal basis for the proposed San Francisco Gay Rights Ordinance. (See Appendix A for the revised text of the Ordinance.) The Ordinance is a comprehensive civil rights law. It prohibits discrimination against gays in employment, housing and public accommodations. It reaches discrimination by private individuals as well as discrimination by governmental agencies. It provides for enforcement by private lawsuits as well as by complaint to the District Attorney.

The provisions which prohibit private (non-governmental) discrimination and those which allow for private enforcement are unusual, and raise questions about the powers of a charter city in California. This memorandum will focus on the particular problems raised by these provisions, and on the question of whether or not federal or State law has preempted this type of enactment. More particularly, the memorandum will address the following issues:

(1) May a municipality enact legislation which alters private civil relationships?

(2) If so, may rights and duties created by a municipal ordinance be enforced by a private civil action in State court?

(3) If so, what remedies are available?

(4) Is this ordinance preempted by:

a. The Federal Civil Rights Law (42 U.S.C. § 2000e), or

1 b. The California Fair Employment Practices
2 Act (Lab. C. §§ 1410, et seq.)?

3 II.

4 POWERS OF A CHARTER CITY

5 A. May a Charter City Enact Legislation
6 Which Alters Private Civil Relationships?

7 A leading authority on the law of municipal corporations has 8 stated that a municipal ordinance may not ordinarily serve as the 9 basis for an action by a private individual. McQuillan, Municipal 10 Corporations, § 27.05 at Vol. 9, pp. 606-607. That statement is 11 based on the widely accepted notion that a municipality may not 12 enact "private laws" to govern civil relationships between private 13 parties. See, e.g., Marshall Howe, Inc. v. Rent Review & Grievance 14 Bd. of Brookline (1970) 357 Mass. 709, 713; and see Smith v. Home 15 Echo Club (Ohio App. 1943), 69 N.E.2d 414-417 (this latter case is 16 McQuillan's sole authority).^{1/} Courts which have so held explain 17 that municipalities, as creations of the Legislature, have no 18 inherent powers. They have only those powers granted them by 19 the Legislature, and in the absence of enabling legislation author-20 izing them to alter private relationships, they may not do so.

21 See Ambassador East, Inc. v. Chicago (1948) 399 Ill. 359, 365-67
22 [77 N.E.2d 803].

23 _____
24 ^{1/} McQuillan bases his statement on dicta which negates the use of 25 a municipal ordinance to set standards of care in a tort action.
26 69 N.E.2d at 417. This doctrine has been expressly rejected by the courts of California. See, e.g., Finnegan v. Royal Realty (1950) 35 Cal.2d 409 [218 P.2d 17].

1 Whatever the law elsewhere, in California the Constitution
2 has granted charter cities inherent police power. Cal. Const.
3 Art. 11, §§ 5a, 7. And in Birkenfield v. City of Berkeley (1976) 4 17 Cal.3d 129, 142-43 [130 Cal.Rptr. 465, 550 P.2d 1001] the 5 California Supreme Court expressly held that Article 11, § 7 of 6 the California Constitution empowers a charter city to make 7 legislation which alters private civil relationships. The 8 Constitution, the Court said, limits a charter municipality's 9 police power in just two ways: (1) it may be exercised only within 10 a city's own territory; and (2) it is subject to preemption by 11 State law. The Court expressly denied the existence of any "private 12 law" exception to the municipal police power, and declared that in 13 the absence of preemption by State law, a charter city's police 14 power is as broad as that of the State Legislature. Birkenfield 15 v. City of Berkeley, supra, 17 Cal.3d at 140-143.

16 A municipality's power is as broad as that of the Legislature, 17 not only in terms of the types of legislation it may enact, but 18 also in terms of subject matter. That is, the subject matter of 19 municipal legislation need not be "local" in nature.^{2/} Any matter

20 _____
21 ^{2/} If the subject matter of a municipal enactment were properly 22 characterized a "municipal affair," then the local ordinance 23 would prevail over any contrary State law; i.e., the local 24 ordinance would preempt State law. Cal. Const., Art. 11, § 5.
25 See Birkenfield v. City of Berkeley (1976) 17 Cal.3d 129, 141, 26 n. 9 [130 Cal. Rptr. 465, 550 P.2d 1001].

25 ///

26 ///

1 properly the subject of State action is a proper subject for 2 charter city legislation, absent preemption. Bishop v. City of 3 San Jose (1969) 1 Cal.3d 56, 62 [81 Cal.Rptr. 465, 460 P.2d 137].
4 (Bishop expressly overrules contrary language in Abbot v. City
5 of Los Angeles (1960) 53 Cal.2d 674, 681 [3 Cal.Rptr. 158, 349
6 P.2d 974] at p. 62 of 1 Cal.3d, n. 5.)

7 The State Legislature may use its police power to pass civil 8 rights laws which regulate private conduct. Greenberg v. Western 9 Turf Ass'n (1903) 140 Cal. 357, 360-61 [73 P. 1050], aff'd 10 204 U.S. 359 [27 S.Ct. 384, 51 L.Ed. 520]; see also Orloff v.
11 Los Angeles Turf Club (1951) 36 Cal.2d 734, 739 [227 P.2d 449].

12 Since there is no "private law" restriction on a charter 13 city's police power, and since a charter city's police power is 14 as broad as that of the State Legislature, a charter city may 15 enact civil rights laws which regulate private civil relationships.
16 See Birkenfield v. City of Berkeley (1976) 17 Cal.3d 129, 140-143
17 [130 Cal.Rptr. 465, 500 P.2d 1001]; see also District of Columbia 18 v. Thompson Co. (1952) 346 U.S. 100, 108-09 [73 S.Ct. 1607, 19 97 L.Ed. 1480].

20

21 B. May Rights and Dicta Protected by a Municipal 22 Ordinance Be Enforced by a Private Civil Action
23 In State Court?

24 It is not the type of private civil right discussed above 25 which is enforced when a local district attorney brings a criminal 26 action for violation of a municipal civil rights law. Although the district attorney seeks redress for violation of roughly the 1 same general "duty" (in this case, the duty not to discriminate), 2 he enforces the principal right to outlaw discrimination in the 3 city, not a private civil right to be free from such discrimination.

4 See McQuillan, Municipal Corporations, § 24.430, Vol. 7, pp. 405-06.

5 A municipality could enact a civil rights law which pro-
6 hibited discrimination and provided for enforcement by the district 7 attorney even if it lacked the power to enact "private" laws or 8 to effect private civil relationships. Compare Bloom v. City of 9 Worcester (1973) 363 Mass. 136, [293 N.E.2d 268-275] with 10 Marshall House, Inc. v. Rent Review and Grievance Bd. of Brookline 11 (1970) 357 Mass. 709-713 [260 N.E.2d 200]; and see McQuillan, 12 Municipal Corporations, § 24.430, Vol. 7, pp. 405-06.

13 Here, the issue is whether, granted that the City can create 14 a private civil right to be free of discrimination, the State has 15 vested the courts with the authority to enforce municipally-created 16 private rights.

17 California courts have held themselves to be so empowered. In 18 Sapiro v. Frisbie (1928) 93 Cal.App. 299 [270 P. 280], the Court 19 considered a municipal ordinance which prohibited the establishment 20 of a business in an area zoned residential, and made no provision 21 for a remedy. The plaintiff, a homeowner in a residential zone, 22 sought damages for the defendant's operation of a funeral parlor
23 in close proximity to his residence. The Court reversed the dis-24 missal of his complaint and said:

25 ///
26 ///

1 "It is a well established and commonly 2 recognized general rule that where a right is 3 given by statute or municipal ordinance to a 4 particular class of persons and for their 5 special protection, and not merely for the 6 protection of the public at large, a liability 7 is thereby created in favor of such particular 8 class as against any person who violates such 9 right . . . which liability may be enforced by 10 means of a civil action or civil remedy appro-11 priate to the circumstances peculiar to the 12 particular case." 93 Cal.App. at 305-06.

13 To the same effect are McIvor v. Mercer-Fraser Co. (1946)
14 76 Cal.App.2d 247, 253-54 [172 P.2d 758] (allowing a civil action 15 for damages for excavation work in violation of a city ordinance)
16 and Milliron v. Dittman (1919) 180 Cal. 443, 445-46 [181 P. 779] 17 (permitting a direct action against a liability insurer, the 18 liability created by a municipal ordinance where none existed at 19 State law).

20 Although the courts have occasionally allowed private 21 enforcement of a municipal ordinance on the theory that it estab-
22 lished a standard of care or a defense in a State-created cause 23 of action (usually nuisance or negligence) (see, e.g., Finnegan v.
24 Royal Realty (1950) 35 Cal.2d 409 [218 P.2d 17]), the Court in 25 Sapiro v. Frisbie (1928) 93 Cal.App. 299 [270 P. 280] expressly 26 denied any reliance on that doctrine. Said the Court, 27 "[n]either in point of fact nor of law was 28 there negligence in the acts charged here

29 against the defendants. The right of action 30 in this case is based upon a wrong flowing 31 from the breach of a statutory duty owing by 32 all other persons to the plaintiffs as members 33 of a class of persons for whose protection only 34 the ordinance involved herein was and is 35 designed." 93 Cal.App. at 308.

1 (See also the language in McIvor v. Mercer-Ascher Co. (1946)
2 76 Cal.App.2d 247, 253-54 [172 P.2d 758] (violation of ordinance 3 ". . . constituted an actionable wrong against each member of 4 the community for whose particular welfare the ordinance was 5 enacted, . . .").)

6 The theory behind allowing private enforcement in State 7 courts of municipally created private rights is that the courts
8 of California have the inherent power to enforce any duly created 9 right. See River Garden Farms, Inc. v. Superior Court (1972)
10 26 Cal.App.3d 986, 1001 [103 Cal.Rptr. 498, 509]; C.C.P. § 1428; 11 2 Witkin, California Procedure, Actions, § 3, p. 881. Given that 12 the municipality can validly create the right (see above, p. 4), 13 it would be logical to deny enforcement only if there were some-14 thing peculiar and limited about rights created by municipalities 15 under their police power. The courts of California have specifi-16 cally rejected that notion. Sapiro v. Frisbie (1928) 93 Cal.App.
17 299, 309 [270 P. 280]; and see Birkenfield v. City of Berkeley 18 (1976) 17 Cal.3d 129, 140 [130 Cal.Rptr. 465, 473] (municipal 19 police power is as broad as the power of the Legislature itself).

20 Provided the San Francisco ordinance is not limited to 21 enforcement by the District Attorney, it may be enforced by a 22 civil action.

23 ///

25 ///
26 ///

1 C. May the Rights and Duties Created by a Municipal 2 Ordinance Be Enforced by the Type of Specific 3 Remedies Provided for in the Proposed San Francisco
4 Ordinance (Damages and Injunction)?

5 The proposed San Francisco Gay Rights Ordinance allows any 6 court in which an action based upon it is brought to award compen-7 satory damages or, in a proper case, injunctive relief.

8 Even if the San Francisco Ordinance were silent on remedies, 9 it could be enforced by an action for damages. See McIvor v.
10 Mercer-Fraser Co. (1946) 76 Cal.App.2d 247, 253-54 [172 P.2d 894].

11 Similarly, since the Superior Court is vested with general 12 equitable jurisdiction, it may issue an injunction to enforce the 13 private rights created by a municipal ordinance in a proper case, 14 even in the absence of any provision for enforcement. Sapiro v.
15 Frisbie (1928) 93 Cal.App. 299, 303-05 [270 P. 280] (municipal 16 ordinance -- see above, p. 5); and see Paxton v. Paxton (1907)
17 150 Cal. 667, 670-71 [89 P. 1083, 1084] (Civ. C. § 206).

18 And again, whenever fraud, oppression or malice is shown in 19 an action not based on a contract, exemplary damages may be 20 awarded regardless of whether the underlying cause of action is 21 based on statute or common law, and despite the fact that the 22 statute upon which it is based is silent on remedies. Civ. C.
23 § 3294; and see Aweeka v. Bonds (1971) 20 Cal.App.3d 278, 281 24 [97 Cal.Rptr. 650] (allowing an affirmative cause of action and 25 a claim for exemplary damages on the basis of Civ. C. §§ 1941, 26 1942).

Since the proposed San Francisco Gay Rights Ordinance could

1 be enforced by a private civil action for compensatory damages
2 or, in a proper case, exemplary damages or an injunction, a State
3 court could award the remedies provided for in the Ordinance.

4 III

5 PREEMPTION

6 A. In General

7 Even though a municipality has the authority to enact a given 8 ordinance, it will be void under the Supremacy Clause of the 9 United States Constitution (Art. VI) or the comparable provision 10 of the State Constitution (Art. 11, § 7) if it is "preempted" by 11 federal or State legislation.

12 There are two ways in which a municipal ordinance may be 13 preempted by State or federal law. First, municipal enactments 14 are preempted if they are in direct conflict with State or federal 15 legislation. Second, municipal enactments are preempted, even 16 though they deal with conduct not covered by other laws, if 17 Congress or the Legislature has evidenced an intent to "occupy 18 the entire field" and preclude any local legislation on the subject.

19 California courts hold further that local legislation is 20 preempted by State law if it duplicates the requirements of State 21 law and creates a "conflict in jurisdiction." Under none of these 22 doctrines is the proposed Gay Rights Ordinance preempted.

23 24 B. The Employment Provisions

25 (1) Direct Conflict

26 Any local enactment which directly conflicts with a State or

1 federal law is void. See Galvan v. Superior Court (1969) 70 Cal.2d
2 851 [76 Cal.Rptr. 642, 645, 452 P.2d 930].

3 A direct conflict occurs where: (1) a municipal ordinance 4 sanctions an activity prohibited by higher law; or (2) a municipal 5 ordinance bans an activity expressly permitted by higher law. See, 6 e.g., La Franchi v. City of Santa Rosa (1937) 8 Cal.2d 331, 335
7 [65 P.2d 1301, 110 A.L.R. 639].

8 The applicable federal statute on employment discrimination is 9 the 1965 Civil Rights Act, 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2. The applicable
10 State statute is the Fair Employment Practices Act, Lab. C. § 1410, 11 et seq.

12 There is no direct conflict of the first type between the 13 proposed Gay Rights Law and either of these statutes. The 1964 14 Civil Rights Act, in detailed provisions very similar to those 15 contained in the proposed San Francisco Ordinance, prohibits 16 employment discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex or 17 national origin. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2. The Fair Employment Practices
18 Act bans discrimination based on race, religious creed, color, 19 national origin, ancestry, physical handicap, mental condition, 20 marital status, or sex. Lab. C. § 1410. The proposed San Francisco 21 Gay Rights Law does not sanction discrimination of any kind. See 22 proposed San Francisco Human Rights Law, Appendix A.

23 There is no direct conflict of the second type. The proposed 24 San Francisco Gay Rights Law prohibits employment discrimination 25 based on sexual orientation. Proposed San Francisco Municipal 26 Code, Part II, Chapter VIII, Article 33, beginning at Section 3301.

1 Neither the federal Civil Rights Law nor the Fair Employment
2 Practices Act sanctions any type of discrimination. See 42 U.S.C.
3 § 2000e-2; Lab. C. §§ 1410, et seq.

4 (2) Occupation of the Field

5 Whenever the scope and purpose of federal or State legis-
6 lation evidences an intent to adopt a single scheme of regulation 7 for a particular field of activity, supplementary or additional 8 local legislation is preempted and void. Burbank v. Lockheed 9 Air Terminal (1973) 411 U.S. 624 [93 S.Ct. 1854]; In re Lane
10 (1962) 58 Cal.2d 99 [22 Cal.Rptr. 857, 859, 372 P.2d 897].

11 Typically, neither Congress nor the State Legislature
12 indicates whether or not it intends a particular piece of legis-13 lation to preempt local law, so the courts must discern the intent 14 by examining the legislation. But where the legislation expressly 15 states that it is to be exclusive or nonexclusive, the courts 16 will abide by the Legislature's determination. Pipoly v. Benson 17 (1942) 20 Cal.2d 366, 371-72 [125 P.2d 4821]; Ex parte Daniels 18 (1920) 183 Cal. 636; 641-42 [192 P. 442]; and see Local 246 Util.
19 Wkrs. v. Southern Calif. Edison (C.D. Cal. 1970) 320 F.Supp. 1262-20 1264.

21 The federal Civil Rights Act (Title VII) is explicitly not 22 preemptive. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-7 provides that absent direct 23 conflict, Title VII does not preempt any State or local laws.
24 See also 42 U.S.C. § 2000h-4. Since Congress has expressly declared 25 that it does not wish to occupy the field, there can be no federal 26 preemption. See, e.g., Prudential Ins. Co. v. Benjamin (1946)

2 The California Fair Employment Practices Act is explicitly 3 preemptive. Lab. C. § 1432 prohibits cities and counties from 4 creating administrative bodies with jurisdiction over employment 5 discrimination based on race, religious creed, color, national 6 origin, ancestry, physical handicap, medical condition, marital 7 status or sex.^{3/} This provision does not preempt the proposed

8 _____ 9 ^{3/} Lab. C. § 1432 provides:

10 "The provisions of this part shall be construed liberally for 11 the accomplishment of the purposes thereof. Nothing contained in 12 this part shall be deemed to repeal any of the provisions of Civil 13 Rights Law or of any other law of this state relating to discrimin-14 ation because of race, religious creed, color, national origin, 15 ancestry, physical handicap, medical condition, marital status, or 16 sex.

17 "Nothing contained in this part shall be deemed to repeal or affect 18 the provisions of any ordinance relating to such discrimination in 19 effect in any city, city and county, or county at the time this part 20 becomes effective, insofar as proceedings theretofore commenced under 21 such ordinance or ordinances remain pending and undetermined. The 22 respective administrative bodies then vested with the power and 23 authority to enforce such ordinance or ordinances shall continue to 24 have such power and authority, with no ouster or impairment of 25 jurisdiction, until such pending proceedings are completed, but in no 26 event beyond one year after the effective date of this part.

"Nothing contained in this part relating to discrimination on account of sex or medical condition shall be deemed to affect the operation of the terms or conditions of any bona fide retirement, pension, employee benefit, or insurance plan, provided such terms or conditions are in accordance with customary and reasonable or actuarially sound underwriting practices."

Although the pertinent part (paragraph 2) is written as an explicit nonpreemption, its effect was to prohibit local civil rights commissions one year after the date of enactment.

1 San Francisco Gay Rights Ordinance because the proposed Ordinance
2 applies only to discrimination based on sexual orientation, a 3 type of discrimination not mentioned in Lab. C. § 1432.

4 Unlike the federal Act, the California Law does not indicate 5 a legislative intent to approve local acts which neither conflict 6 with the State law nor fall within the terms of its explicit pre-7 emption. Since the Fair Employment Practices Act is silent on 8 local laws like the proposed San Francisco Ordinance, a Court would 9 have to determine whether or not the Legislature intended to 10 occupy the broad field of employment discrimination to the 11 exclusion of local legislation. Galvan v. Superior Court (1969)
12 70 Cal.2d 851, 859 [76 Cal.Rptr. 642, 452 P.2d 930].

13 The California Supreme Court has devised three tests for 14 determining when a particular field has been preempted. They are:
15 (1) the subject matter has been so fully and completely covered 16 by general law as to clearly indicate that it has become exclu-17 sively a matter of State concern; (2) the subject matter has been 18 partially covered by general law couched in such terms as to 19 indicate clearly a paramount State concern will not tolerate

20

21 (Continuation of footnote 3/)

22 The scope of the prohibition is determined by the phrase "such 23 discrimination" in the first sentence which refers back to the first 24 paragraph. That paragraph states that the discrimination with which 25 the provision is concerned is discrimination based on race, religious 26 creed, color, national origin, ancestry, physical handicap, medical condition, marital status or sex. Thus the explicit prevention of local legislation with respect to "such discrimination" applies only to these enumerated categories. The Act is silent on discrimination based on sexual orientation.

1 further or additional local action; (3) the subject matter has been 2 partially covered by general law and the subject is of such a 3 nature that the adverse effect of a local ordinance on the 4 transient citizens of the State outweighs the possible benefit
5 to the municipality. In re Hubbard (1964) 62 Cal.2d 119, 128
6 [41 Cal.Rptr. 393, 396 P.2d 309].

7 In Galvan v. Superior Court (1969) 70 Cal.2d 851, 860-63
8 [76 Cal.Rptr. 642, 452 P.2d 930], the Court upheld a San Francisco
9 gun registration ordinance under all three tests. The plaintiff, 10 citing over 80 State statutes on gun control, argued that the 11 field of gun control was "completely covered" by the general law.
12 The Court made two points in rejecting the claim: (1) that since 13 some of the statutes contained limited explicit preemptions which 14 would have been unnecessary had the field been covered, the 15 Legislature probably did not think it had preempted the entire 16 field; and (2) that despite the many statutes, the Legislature 17 had done little with respect to the specific problem of registra-18 tion. Galvan v. Superior Court (1969) 70 Cal.2d 851, 860-63
19 [76 Cal.Rptr. 642, 452 P.2d 930].

20 Similarly here, the limited preemption of Lab. C. § 1432
21 indicates that the Legislature did not believe it had preempted 22 all municipal legislation on employment discrimination, and the 23 fact that the Legislature has done nothing with respect to employ-24 ment discrimination based on sexual orientation should prevent 25 the F.E.P.A. from being labelled "complete." See also In re Hubbard
26 (1964) 62 Cal.2d 119, 123-27 [41 Cal.Rptr. 393, 396 P.2d 309]

1 numerous State gambling statutes do not "cover" the field of gaming, 2 since some activities are unregulated) and Bell v. City of Mountain 3 View (1977) 66 Cal.App.3d 332 (State licensing of ambulances does 4 not preclude local licensing of "non-emergency" ambulances where 5 that precise category is not covered by State law).

6 In rejecting Galvan's attack under the second Hubbard standard 7 (partial legislation couched in terms which indicate that para-8 mount State concerns prohibit local regulation), the Court stressed 9 two factors: (1) terminology which indicated a belief by the 10 Legislature that local regulation was prohibited, and (2) whether 11 local needs have been adequately dealt with at the State level.
12 Galvan v. Superior Court, supra, 70 Cal.2d at 863-64.

13 As noted above, the fact that the Legislature felt a need 14 (in Lab. C. § 1432) to expressly prohibit certain types of municipi-15 pal legislation indicates that it did not believe all local 16 employment discrimination was prohibited by virtue of the fact 17 that it was an issue of paramount State concern. And far from 18 dealing "adequately" with the local problem of discrimination 19 based on sexual orientation, the State has done nothing about it.

20 Finally, the proposed San Francisco Gay Rights Ordinance
21 would place little or no burden on transients. It places 22 restrictions on labor unions, employment agencies, and employers, 23 none of which are likely to be individuals passing through the 24 City. See Galvan v. Superior Court (1969) 70 Cal.2d 851, 864-65
25 [76 Cal.Rptr. 642, 452 P.2d 930].

26 Since the Legislature has not explicitly prohibited this type

1 of ordinance, and since it has not indicated any intent to prevent 2 local regulation of this activity which it has left unregulated, 3 the proposed San Francisco Gay Rights Ordinance is not preempted.

4 IV

5 CONCLUSION

6 The proposed San Francisco Gay Rights Ordinance is not an 7 attempt to control the State courts or to interfere with matters
8 which can only be addressed by the State Legislature. California 9 charter cities have the power to create private civil rights, and the 10 State has empowered its courts to enforce any duly created right.

11 The Ordinance is not an attempt to interfere with an exclusive 12 State scheme for regulating employment discrimination. The Legis-13 lature has indicated the kinds of local action it will not tolerate, 14 and this proposal does not fall within them.

15 The proposed legislation addresses a serious problem ignored 16 by the State and federal governments. As a charter city, San 17 Francisco has the necessary power to fill this vacuum.
